

What Women find Attractive?

Even at his death bed, the great psychologist Sigmund Freud often wondered to himself, "What do women want?"

Most men are attracted to women simply by sight. This process happens almost instantaneously, and more often than not, attraction is not by choice.

It would be a big mistake to assume that attraction works the same way for women. After all, it would make sense to some men that it would work the same way for women since most men are attracted to attractive looks and sweet and gentle personalities.

When men are rejected or failed in courting the woman of their dreams; they rationalize it by thinking that it must be because they have insufficiencies in one area or the other. For example, they would logically go through the list that they are probably not good looking enough, not nice enough, not rich enough or not "something" enough.

Basics such as personal hygiene, grooming and presentation are a must, and it would be a "put-off" to the woman if this is missing. But the fact remains that great grooming and presentation alone is insufficient for a woman to become attracted to a man.

So what is it that women find attractive in a man then? What do women want?

A woman's attraction to a man is much more complicated than a man's attraction to a woman. It is the total package that women look for. And a large part of this attraction package for women comes from the "Personality" traits of a man.

A lot of this "personality" is conveyed through the man's attitude, body language and the way he communicates with her. It is actually possible for women to become instantly attracted when they encounter certain personality and physical traits in a man just like how men can become instantly attracted by certain physical traits in a woman.

When it comes to attraction, many men forget that a woman bases her attraction on FEELINGS, not logical deduction. Therefore, most guys make the mistake of trying to make it logical and rational for a girl to like him by doing many things for the woman and showing her what a nice person he is through his actions. Women do not want you to endlessly chase after them all the time although they would feel flattered by the attention. The initial gifts and flowers are symbolic but they are not the real things that create attraction.

What they are looking for are feelings of attraction triggered by you. They want a man that can make them feel the "romantic feelings" or "connection" that they so dream about. They want to feel like you are the "right one" for them, not just because you of how much you admire her, but because she feels that she loves and admires you.

Therefore, reverse the mindset. Instead of trying to convince the lady on how rational it is to have feelings for you, be the man she so desires by discovering and then developing within yourself the traits that is attractive to her and you will witness a great difference that will make for your relationships with women.